- b) Put any ten list words into sentences.
- c) Find the homophone of "cue" beginning with "que" in the dictionary.
- d) Sometimes "y" can be pronounced as a vowel sound, e.g. in plenty it sounds like an "ee". In most words it sounds like a consonant, e.g. yesterday.

Write three other words (not list words) where the "y" sounds like a vowel and three words where it sounds like a consonant. Remember, vowels = a, e, i, o and u; consonants are the remaining letters of the alphabet.

- e) When adding "ing" to most words ending in "e", the final "e" is dropped, e.g. make / making. Add "ing" to these words:
glue, argue, pursue, rescue, value, continue, queue, intrigue, cue.
- f) Adverbs add description to the meaning of a verb and are often adjectives with "ly" added to them, e.g. happy / happily. Remember, where the word ends in "y", the "e" is changed into an "i" before adding "ly". Write the adverbs of these adjectives:
brave, usual, angry, foolish, immediate, anxious.
continuous, innocent, desperate. Put two of the adverbs into sentences.
- g) "Easy" is an adjective. When comparing the "easiness" of different things they are called comparative adjectives, e.g. easier, easiest. Write the two comparative adjectives of:
lonely, friendly, chilly, furry, pretty, juicy, stealthy.
